The facts are just on their read home that night. coming to light concerning a very interesting incident connected with the Sanders army of train stealers who were brought to this city after being captured by United States Marshal Neely. The investigations made show that there were two young ladies among the prisoners brought here, and that their identity was discovered, but such ATTORNEY: AT: LAW, secrecy was imposed on the few who had any knowledge about the affair that it was only when they were gone that a hint was dropped from which the correspondent has unraveled all the facts of the incident. When "General" Sanders was trying to provide-transportation for his army from Pueblo across the arid region of East Colorado and West Kansar, his six companies were joined by a seventh, which was recruited in Pueblo, and, under the command of Captain Shoeeraft, an old soldier of the Tenth Michigan, was mustered into the Sanders branch of the Coxey Commonweal Army as "Company G." Like some of the other companies the majority of this company were quite young. The entire army was composed largely of such men as had no families, who had allowed the men with families to remain about the mines, doing the little work there provided.

In 1889 Emeline and Leonore Gordon, with their mother and invalid father, left their old home near Franklinville, Cataraugus county, New York, to try the mountain air of Colorado, hoping to benefit their father's health. They were about Greeley, Salida, Colorado Springs, and while at Pueblo, over three years ago, he died. The mother was broken in health, and followed in less than six months.
